IN "THE MELODY OF YOUTH."

The Conning Tower

AN ANTHOLOGY OF DIFFERENTIATION.

HOARHOUNDS AND LICORICE.

With an applogetic lear at Swinburne. when the hounds of spring are on winter's traces Hearhounds in March-if I might explain) that monster of months frets our frosted faces With lashes of hail and tickle of rain; And a million of microbes malevolous Are lying in wait to bedevil us, With their baleful nips in a hundred places; For all of the gargles that we maintain.

in the teeth of the tempest his key mane quivers; Lean lion of March, rip-roaring in might. My timid teeth chatter; my shrinking spine shivers, At thought of the wees in the wake of his flight. Don thy goloshes, or clumsy or nest, Over the splendor and spats of thy feet! the snow turns to slush, the rain runs rivers;

You'll need them by day and you'll need them by night. There's a glimpse of a ghost of an ache all over;

Premonitions of pains that prick like pins; Take a brimming beaker of brew of clover) Fest grown heavy, a head that spins; A tickling touch of tonsillitis; A double-quick dose or two of rbinitisa capsule of quinine a pill of Dover)

And that is the way the grippe begins, he hearhound trips in the microbe's hair; as menthel prodding around lays bare Her poisonous fangs stripped of all disguise; The peppermint smothers with smell of its leaves, While the sticky licorice catches and cleaves To the wings that flitter, the feet that scare he wings that filter, the receiver that files.

The hound that follows, the germ that files.

"AUDREY" TRITE, BUT ENJOYABLE

Film at Strand Built on Traditional Ward-and-Guardian Model.

SOME GOOD ACTING BY FRANK KEENAN

"The Stepping Stone" (Triangle) Also Follows the Badly Beaten Path.

A ward and her guardian are soon parted. Sometimes the parting is accomplished by means of the abduction of the ward, and sometimes the guardian is compelled to take a long journey. The means to the separation do not greatly matter, but the separation itself is a dramatic necessity. Otherwise the pair could not meet again, years later, to find in one another their true happiness.

Of such, or nearly such, have been innumerable plays "Daddy Long of Youth." And of such is "Audrey," Mary Johnson's novel, which is set to pictures at the Strand this week. "Audrey," despite its adherence to the rigid lines of the conventional, is quite a good picture. It has no more than the expected number of absurdities and
